Long Bio

George Khalaf

Republican Candidate for Arizona State House, LD3

George Khalaf is a candidate for Arizona State House in LD3. He defines himself first and foremost as a Christian, a husband to Briana, a father to three sons, and an unabashed America-First conservative.

George comes from a line of courageous, freedom-loving Christians. His family are Lebanese Christians, and he grew up hearing stories of his uncle who gave his life at 19 years old fighting for his family and Christian faith in the Lebanese Civil War. His parents met in an underground bunker during that same war, got married, and legally came to the United States to raise their children in an environment where faith and family could be lived freely.

His professional background is in political data and consulting and education freedom advocacy, where he is proud to have taken arrows fighting for the conservative causes he believes in. George is the Managing Partner of The Resolute Group, founder of the nationally-recognized data and survey research firm, Data Orbital, and co-founder of First Day, a public relations firm providing consulting for education freedom organizations and innovators.

Scottsdale Mayor Lisa Borowsky, Scottsdale Council Members Jan Dubauskas, Barry Graham, and Kathy Littlefield, Fountain Hills Mayor Gerry Friedel, Fountain Hills Council Members Gayle Earle and Allen Skillicorn, Scottsdale Unified School District Board Member Amy Carney, former State Senator Nancy Barto, Cathi Herrod, Seth Leibsohn, and many other grassroots conservative leaders have endorsed his candidacy.

George graduated from Arizona State University with a Bachelor's in Political Science. He and his family reside in Scottsdale, Arizona.
